CASE STUDY Huhtamaki

SITUATION

Huhtamaki is a global specialist in packaging for food with manufacturing facilities and sales offices in 34 countries. Its 17,000+ employees help make hundreds of every day products from food to-go containers, paper plates, shampoo packaging and egg cartons to molded products that protect fragile items like consumer electronics and wine bottles.

The organization places a high value on employee training and development, with a keen understanding of the inherent challenges of a large and divergent workforce in multiple geographic locations.

Not only are there multiple departments, but each of the company's sites has a different area of responsibility in the manufacturing, distribution and sales pipeline. Huhtamaki needed a customized platform to better serve its employees' training needs, as well as provide ongoing education to help them advance within the organization.

Huhtamaki

SOLUTIONS

After working with training companies that couldn't meet its specific needs, Huhtamaki turned to Pryor Learning—a comprehensive learning provider offering more than 10,000 course opportunities addressing tactical skills and technical knowledge, as well as business acumen and leadership development.

“We view Pryor Learning as an integral partner and extension of our staff. They do everything from new course design, to handling the learning management system to employee communications about the offerings. This allows my staff and I to concentrate on other responsibilities.”

- Kelly Burke,
Corporate HR Manager, Huhtamaki

Pryor+ is a one-stop shop for employees to access custom courses. Those wanting to move into different departments, or advance their existing skills, can work with their managers on a customized development plan. Site managers can assign specific courses that are only relevant to its operations. Because many of its manufacturing floor employees don't have computers, Huhtamaki has computer workstations on the manufacturing floor or in breakrooms so employees have convenient access to short and relevant courses.

RESULT

- Cost savings: Implementing the company's own training programs would require additional full-time employees, which could cost the company up to $160,000 annually.

- Greater offerings: With Pryor+, the company can offer a breadth of courses—thousands more than if the company relied solely on in-house resources.
- Developing workforce: The company has tied the Pryor+ training to its culture initiatives, which helps employees develop skills tied to the organization's goals.

WHAT'S NEXT?

Building on Huhtamaki's domestic success, Pryor Learning is developing a customizable, pilot program for the company's Finland-based sales staff. The program helps employees identify specific courses—such as being more assertive, communicating effectively with prospective customers and closing sales—that enhance their skill set.
